2021 Growing Conditions: An average winter was followed by late March/April warming. A wetter than normal summer gave ample vine growth. The weather dried up mid-August and gave us 2 months of great weather for ripening. The season ended with a big rain coming through the very end of October, but we harvested every last grape before it hit.

Winemaking Background: Tocai Friulano is the grape widely planted in the Friuli region located in the northeastern corner of Italy. Because of similar growing conditions to the Friuli region, and Tocai's winter "hardiness", Millbrook's plantings have proven to be extremely successful.
